

Mobility Study Will Examine How We Move Around Our Community

Through a collaborative effort, the City of Manitou Springs, City of Colorado Springs, and the Cog are undertaking a study to identify opportunities and address improvements that will enhance mobility within the City and connections to adjoining regional areas and transportation systems.

The study will examine the following aspects of how people move around in our community currently, projected needs for the future, and recommended improvements to meet those needs, including:

- vehicular traffic volume and movements;
- vehicular parking; and
- pedestrian and bicycle volume and movements.

The outcome of the Mobility Study will likely impact several local projects currently underway, including the future of the Hiawatha Gardens footprint. The visionary and future-forward plan should advance and evolve community goals identified in Plan Manitou and align with planning/design efforts of other mobility projects.
